Continuation of 3. NOTE:

The added limitations "wherein the network stack interface is defined for communication between a transport layer and any higher layer in the software stack layers", "the network stack interface that is defined between the transport layer and any higher layer", and "wherein a selected one of the plurality of buffer descriptors stores a memory address and length of a buffer and references the memory address and length of the buffer to a next selected one of the plurality of buffer descriptors" in claim 1 raise new issues that would require further consideration and/or search.

The added limitations "wherein the network stack interface is defined for communication between a transport layer and any higher layer in the software stack layers", and "the network stack interface, that is defined between the transport layer and any higher layer" in claim 18 raise new issues that would require further consideration and/or search.

Added claim 21 also raises new issues that would require further consideration and/or search.
